The singing was creditable to every participant, and the audience was so well pleased as to encore every member of the concert company. It must be gratifying to Mrs. zevant to know that her own efforts and ose of her friends have been successful, and forded so much pleasure to the public. Robert W. Cox Disappears from Home His Friends are Greatly Alarmed, but Finally Discover his Whereabouts.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Robert W. Cox, well known young man who resides at No 81 Robeson street, mysteriously disappeared from home, and it was feared that he had ommitted suicide. In his room was found a letter containing one hundred and fifty dol-lars, and addressed to his wife. In the envelope was the following note to his wife:

"Em.—Do not doubt my love, for I love you better than life; I leave you, knowing you can do better than living with me."

Tuesday night and yesterday search was made for the missing man, who, last night, was found two miles out in the country.

Seven months ago, Mr. Cox, who is bookkeeper for R. L. Cocbran & Co., married Miss Dreisigacker, but owing to the violent opposition of his mother, attempted to kill him-self with laudanum. He has lived happily with his wife, and his immediate friends were all the more surprised to hear of his disappearance. Upon examination it is found that young Cox has been sick for some time, and was laboring under mental aberration when he left home Tuesday.

A TERRIBLE MURDER.

An Aged Negro Splits his Wife's Head with an Ax-A Fearful Story of Vice and Depravity.

The Helena (Ark.) World, of the twentyfifth instant, says: "On Saturday night a cold-blooded murder was committed on the Craig place, about ten miles south of this city. The particulars are as follows: Sam Rolins, a colored man seventy years of age, and his wife, sixty-five years old, have been farming on the Craig plantation for severa years, and to all appearance living amicably together until recently. It seems that the wife had another husband living, to whom she was married before the war, but at the outbreak of the rebellion a separation took place, and the parties did not see each other again for sixteen years or more. In the meantime the woman married Rolins, and lived quietly until the appearance of the first husband on the scene, second husband became jealous and engaged in frequent quarrels with his wife. These disturbances soon were of a serious nature, and last Saturday the woman went fishing and met her former husband. When she returned home her husband No. 2 told her she could not sleep in his house, and must leave. Hot words passed between them, which ter-minated in the man going out in the yard, getting an ax and returning to the room, when the row continued. He attacked the woman and struck her four fearful blows with the ax, knocking her brains out and crushing her head into a shapeless mass. He threw the death-dealing instrument away and escaped. So far he has not been apprehended, but we sincerely trust he will be arrested and receive the punishment so well mented. The deed was fearful, being one of those deliberate and cruel acts which injure the people as well as a violation of our law. Although like many other criminals, we suppose he wil be permitted to roam the country at large. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts.'

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Mississippi Politics. EDITORS APPEAL-The Democracy of Mississippi will assemble in convention early in August for the purpose of selecting from among many worthy applicants candidates the reason that I am of those who believe etc., impart a flavor at once apetizing and that honest merit should receive its reward. I that honest merit should receive its reward. I write this to say a word in behalf of a gentleman whose name I have repeatedly heard mentioned in connection with the office of secretary of state. The genteman to whom I allude is Colonel J. L. M'Cullum, the chivalious and cultured editor of the Herald-Democrat, at Yazoo City. Colonel M Cullum has long been editorially connected with Democratic ournalism in Mississippi, and at no time has he, in the slightest degree, flinched from the responsibility that tested the grit of a true manhood, nor turned his back for a moment upon his party banner. When the murky clouds of carpetbag misrule lowered upon our State, and threatened her institutions with annihilation, and her people with devasta-tion, Colonel M'Cullum boldly and nobly stood at his post as chief editor of the Central Star, at Kosciusko, and later, the editor of the Herald-Democrat, at Yazoo into the enemies ranks;

City, and poured an incessant fire of red-hot to him, as much as to any other gentleman in the State, are gentleman in the State, are Mississippians indebted for the glorious blessings of untrammeled State government and home-rule. While Mississippi has many noble sons, worthy of all confidence, there is among them not one who merits a reward for honest and faithful stewardship in a more eminent degree than does the gifted M'Cullum. Let us hope that the people of Mississippi will show their appreciation of a faithful and unflinching friend in the dark hour of her tribulation by electing Colonel M'Cullum secretary of state. The people of cene tral Mississippi, where he has lived and labored, to this proposition say, with one voice, Amen. LAUNCELOT. A Correction. EDITORS APPEAL—Your intelligent and usually correct correspondent, Colonel J. T. ment, in his letter to the APPEAL of yesternundred thousand more. The fact is that St. BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS.—The Louis, through her newspaper and official exchange reports, studiously avoids the publication of the actual net receipts of cotton at that point, but continually advertises her gross receipts, leaving to the reader and distant public the task of "guessing" as to what proportion of such gross movement embraces cotton actually received and sold by her merchants. But taking these gross figures as a basis of comparison, we find that from September 1, 1876 to June 22, 1877, the total receipts at that point were two hundred and seventeen thousand three hundred and nine bales, against two hundred and fortythree thousand five hundred and seventy seven bales for the same time in 1875-76. thus showing a decrease for this year of twenty-six thousand two hundred and sixtyeight bales, instead of an increase of one hundred thousand. On the other hand, our cotton exchange authorities count as Mem phis receipts only such cotton as is actually consigned to our merchants and sold in this market. The account of gross or through cotton is kept entirely separate, and does not appear in the daily statements published by the exchange or through the daily press. If we add this through cotton to our net re-ceipts, the total would show a falling off of less than seventy-five thousand bales, whereas the damage to last year's crop by drouth and frost, was notoriously over twenty-five per cent, and indicating a decrease in our yearly receipts of fully one hundred and twenty-five thousand bales. From this it is evident that Memphis is not only receiving a full share of last season's crop, but, making proper allowance for decreased yield in the section of country tributary to her, that the enterprise of her merchants and the superior advantages of her market have largely augmented her receipts at the expense of less enterprising rivals. Truly yours, FACTOR.

The Reesnover murder case, still occupies the attention of the criminal court. Yesterday a number of witnesses for the defense were absent, and attachments were issued to secure their presence. As our readers will remember, Samuel Ellis is said to have been killed by Robert and Thomas Reesnover, near Germantown, in this county; it will also be remembered that Ellis was charged with slandering Miss Bettie L. Brewster, niece of the Reesnover brothers, and that he was asked to retract what he said in relation to the young lady. This, Ellis did not do; but he was subsequently killed upon the highway. The document which the Reesnover brothers demanded Ellis to sign was yesterday referred to in court by the counsel and witnesses. The document is as follows:

SHELBY COUNTY, TENN., May 25, 1876. This is to certify that whereas I, Samuel Ellis, of ninth civil district of Shelby ounty, and State of Tennessee, did, at diagrent times, during the last two or three months, at divers places and before divers persons, maliciously and wilfully fabricate and publish and speak certain libelous, false and utterly untrue statements affecting the name, honor and character and social standing of a lady, one Miss Bettie L. Brewster; now, therefore, know all persons, that I did wantonly, wilfully and maliciously lie, and I hereby proclaim myself as unworthy of all credence. Witness my hand, this May 25, 1876. An attempt was made to introduce as testimony an affidavit written by Thomas Reesnover and sworn to by Mr. Kimbro, to the effect that Mr. Ellis repeated the slanderous words to him, and which affidavit formed the basis upon which the above retraction was written, and which retraction Mr. Ellis was asked to sign immediately before the killing took place. It appears, however, that Mr. Kimbro, when on the witness-stand, testified Ellis. The affidavit was ruled out.

The Very Best Authority that can be procured as to merit is that of an intelligent committee appointed to examine and report. Lea & Perrins's Worcestershire sauce was submitted to such a test at the late Centennial exhibition, and a premium awarded for—first, "excellent taste;" second, "very carefully prepared." The decision of the committee was not unexpected, as it is but a confirmation of the opinion of the leading hotels, clubs, private families, etc., etc., of both continents, that have for many years declared it to be the "best sauce governor and other State officers. The Great West-ern Clothing House is the place par excellence for the purchase of everything in the line of men's wearing apparel. Harry Cohn buys for cash, at bottom ligures, and sells the same way. He, of all clothiers, has established a reputation for good goods, low prices and fair dealing. Others may imitate him, but Harry Cohn is and remains the only "Richmond" in the field. Bulls, Bears, Puts and Calls, The St. Louis Republican supplies the following explanation of certain terms that are

What is a 'bear?' What is a 'long?' What is a 'short?' What is an 'option?' What is a 'put?' What is a 'call?' What is a 'straddle?' Why is the call board so named? A bull is a party who, having purchased property for future delivery at a specified price, desires that the price shall advance above this specified price before the day of delivery comes around. A bear is a party who has sold property for future delivery at a specified price, and desires the price to go lower than the figure he sold at before the day of delivery occurs. The party who desires prices to advance is called a 'bull' from the known tendency of bulls to toss up things, and the bear from the gruff and growling disposition he is supposed to possess; for the party who are anxious to suppress prices are always seeking for depressing effects. They are grumblers and growlers—hence 'bears.'

A 'long' is a party who has made purchases for future delivery. He is a 'long' because he has gone long on the article, or belongs to the class who have, perhaps, purchased much more than could possibly be delivered. He is also a bull. A 'short' is the party who has sold for iture delivery. He has gone short on the article dealt in. He belongs to the party who have sold more than could never then party who have sold more than could possibly be delivered. There are bears, also, desiring the price to decline. An 'option' is a thing sold with no specified date of delivery, and is delivered within a given time at the option of the seller. Suppose A sells to B five thousand bushels of corn for the year at forty-five cents. This means that A may deliver to B the corn whenever he pleases from the date of the contract to the end of the year, but he is compelled at the close of the year to settle the deal. A sale for June is so far specified that the delivery must be made in June, but it is optional with the seller to deliver on any day in June.'

A "put" is what may be termed a limited deal. A gives B fifty dollars for the privilege of "putting" to him five thousand bushels of corn at say forty cents any time in a specified month. Should the market be steady or advance beyond forty cents A loses the fifty dollars, but this is the limit of his loss. Should the market decline to thirty-five cents A makes two hundred dollars. For five cents advance upon the five thousand bushels amounts to two hundred and fifty dollars. that when Mr. Ellis detailed the slander to him he (Ellis) refused to give the name of the lady referred to, but that another man, Mr. Miller, stated to him (Kimbro) that Miss Miller, stated to him (Kimbro) that Miss Brewster was the lady referred to by Mr. Ellis, but Mr. Miller did not make the statement to him (Kimbro) in the presence of Ellis. The affidavit was ruled out. of corn during the month of July at, say, forty cents. If the market declines or remains stationary A loses his fifty dollars. Should it advance to forty-five cents he makes two hundred dollars. But like the "put" the loss is always limited to the sum paid for the took place on Thursday last in the presence privilege. The "straddle" is also a limited of a number of the patrons of the school. deal as to loss and combines both the put and This school is under the direction of the Pastors' association, and is in every respect a success. One hundred and fifteen pupils entered during the year which has just closed. Six of these finished the prescribed curriculum of study and will enter the University of University of the part of the part and that for a period of many consecutive days the price has not varied a hair either way. A believes that a movement one way or the other is imminent. He reasons this fell way. By H. Beard, Walter way, and as he is not certain what the more proportion of the part and the call. Suppose the corn market is dull and that for a period of many consecutive days the price has not varied a hair either way. A believes that a movement one way or the other is imminent. He reasons was a proportion of the past the call. Virginia this fall, viz: R. H. Beard, Walter Goodman, Frank Milburn, F. M. Scott, S. J. ment will be, he decides to "straddle" the Shepherd, G. N. Weston. From the records market. So he pays one hundred dollars to B for the privilege of either "putting" five thousand corn at the market rate for all the month, or "calling" for five thousand for all S. J. Shepherd, highest grade in L and G. the month. B does not think the market will go either up or down, or at least that the variation will be small, and he accepts the one hundred dollars. If the market remains steady, the buyer of the straddle loses his hundred dollars; if it changes one cent either way, he loses fifty dollars; if it changes two cents either way he comes out even, and with > makes fifty dollars. As to the legitimacy of the trading in options every one must be his or her own judge, for there are many ladies as well as gentle men who take "flyers" at the call board. Take all kinds of business, risks of loss abound, and if the chance of losing is greater in option dealing than in manufacturing, the gains are also proportionately higher. To call option dealing gambling is unfair, when it is considered that in option dealing the chances of making are equal to the chances of losing; whereas, in gambling the chances that the "professional" or the "bank" will make proits are three to one that they will make lo Consequently the outsider has but one chance of gain to three of loss. In the lottery and "policy" business the chances of winning are still further diminished, one chance in twenty business the chances of winning are to seventy being about the proportion. The call board receives its name from the fact that at a given hour one of the undersecretaries of the exchange mounts the ros trum and calls for propositions to buy or sell. Wheat, corn, oats, and provisions come in their regular order, and the call proceeds until the time set for its duration expires, when it closes, but there is more trading done at what might be termed the spontaneous board
